TREATY COUNCIL (FOR THE UNITED TRIBAL NATIONS) AUSTRALIA

As of its recent meeting in Melbourne, Australia, members of the Treaty Council unanimously passed the following resolution:

“The Treaty Council accepts the exclusive jurisdiction of the International Tribunal for Natural Justice in relation to any and all legal or jurisdictional or human rights or commercial disputes which may arise. It is proposed that local and national disputes be determined according to indigenous lore and custom, as may be appropriate and that international disputes be determined according to the national law of the parties, as may be appropriate, all such taking into account the dictates of the natural law and justice as appropriate and just in all the circumstances.”

The Treaty Council under the jurisdiction of The International Tribunal for Natural Justice, an International Court, will enable economic partnerships with domestic and international corporations, in a fair and equitable way.

The Treaty Council was established to assist the First Nations People of The Great Southern Land, now known as Australia, the oldest continuous living culture on earth. The Treaty Council will also represent on request the Sovereign First Nations People worldwide.
